

Discovering Divinity

My own practice is very much budding. I'm still figuring things out. I've been reading books about witchcraft from a wealth of perspectives.

I think it's fascinating to see all the different takes and how similar concepts take different shapes.

I want to find that divinity and affirm life in a new way. I want to reclaim the joy of childhood that I've lost.

I'm trying a simple morning ritual I read about. I stretch and offer gratitude for a new day of life. Then I rise and open the curtains to greet the new day and admire the miracle of nature. It's so basic, but I've needed this so badly.

